TRAINING PROGRAMME ON INCORPORATING GENDER BUDGETING IN GRAM PANCHAYAT DEVELOPMENT PLANS

Analysing public expenditure with a gendered perspective becomes more relevant when women are considered as marginalised sections of the society. When one takes into consideration Ronda Sharp's perspective that there is no one model for a gender responsive budget exercise, dissemination of knowledge about gender budgeting and expertise on tools which can be used among the stakeholders becomes a necessity.

Raising awareness on gender issues and bringing changes into budgets proposed with gender components, is therefore, what every policy and plan should aim at. With dawning of the Gram Panchayat Development Plan (GPDP) campaign in the year 2018, an intensive and structured exercise has been put into place in every Panchayat and non-part IX area of the country for planning at Gram Sabha level through convergence between Panchayati Raj Institutions (PRIs) and concerned Line Departments of the respective states to come up with GPDPs for every panchayat. It is said that the GPDP process has to be comprehensive incorporating convergence with different schemes of the Central government and State governments related to all 29 subjects listed in the XIth schedule of the Constitution. Seen in this light, it becomes of utmost necessity that the concerned stakeholders in the planning process of the GPDP viz. officials of the Panchayati Raj Institutions and the Line Departments of the State Governments should have a gendered perspective with acquired knowledge on the tools used for gender budgeting. Creation of awareness about coming up with a gender sensitive budget in GPDPs will not only aid in focussing on gender issues in the GPDPs but will also aid in having a women component in the budgets proposed and lead to gender responsive budgeting.

It is in the above context that the Training Programme on 'Incorporating Gender Budgeting in Gram Panchayat Development Plans' is proposed for capacity building of the functionaries of the government and non-government organisations, institutions and departments who are into making and promoting GPDPs.
