BACKGROUND

Though the Government of India through the Ministry of Rural Development has initiated many a scheme to bring about a change in standard of living of the rural households, but the schemes are yet to bring in the desired changes. The Ministry of Tourism, GoI realising off late the significance of rural tourism, has put much emphasis in promoting it as a tool to provide better livelihoods amidst the rural households. This has further led to development of rural tourism sites based on the potential of the prospective rural tourism spots. No doubt, these efforts, put through with the right perspective can modify the entire rural landscape of the country and can transform the living standards of the rural populace.

Tourism being a labour intensive industry can generate enough employment opportunities for the village households thereby making them economically empowered. It has a special significance for the marginalised sections of the society, especially women and backward communities. Through rural tourism, when rural households find a source of livelihood in the nearby vicinity of their native place, this would lead to an improvement in their well-being sans migration. This would have several other indirect benefits by slowing down the rate of migration from rural to urban areas with optimum utilisation of local resources.

The North Eastern states have an immense potential for tourist attractions across rural areas. The cultural heritage in the form of folklores, ethnicity, dance, drama etc. of the region is very rich.

Entrepreneurs can play an important role in sustaining rural tourism and formulation of sustainable strategies being the initiators of the tourism business and the local development. Therefore, it is necessary to stimulate the development of entrepreneurial activities for harnessing rural tourism potentials. Promotion of rural tourism will not only help in opening new sources of income for unemployed youth living in villages, but also reverse the process of migration from rural areas.

Keeping this in view, there is a need to sensitize entrepreneurs and other stakeholders of all concerned departments about the entrepreneurship development for rural tourism, NIRDPR-NERC, Guwahati propose to organise a training programme on “Entrepreneurship Development for Rural Tourism” from June 25-29, 2018 in collaboration with AUS Namsai, Arunachal Pradesh with the following objectives:
